& GIVE BACK A MOMENT

It is not uncommon for people to say to our hospice staff, "I could never do your job." Hospice employees often say it is a calling and demonstrate love and passion for the work that they do. They are dreamers and the care that they provide begins in their heart and mind.

A recent article said it best when a woman articulated, "Hospice employees give back moments." She elaborated, "The hospice nurse took away dad's pain. That allowed him to stay up till 2 a.m. last night looking at photographs and sharing a few laughs before he went to sleep. That was the last conversation I had with my father. Those are treasured moments that I would never have had if the hospice nurse wasn't able to get him comfortable yesterday. The hospice aide bathed him two days ago and put him in a wheelchair and he sat on the porch where he got to spend a few hours with his grandchildren.

Those memories will be the last they have with their grandfather. Hospice did that. These are moments he would not have had, moments and memories we would have missed without hospice." Jim Rohn once said, "Success is nothing more than a few simple disciplines, practiced every day." Dreams often inspire us to carry out everyday tasks so that we might give back a moment. Ordinary people doing extraordinary things. You, too, can dream big and share in an event that may lead to an everlasting moment.

"The best and most beautiful things in the world cannot be seen or even touched - they must be felt with the heart."

~Helen Keller
